

SOCIOLOGY

FPU BRINGS A TRADITION OF EXCELLENCE INTO THE SOCIOLOGY MINOR

ROSA EUSEBIO '16

Sociology is the scientific study of how people both create and are shaped by the social world. Sociologists critically examine a wide range of subjects from the world of everyday routines and relationships to global processes.

The Sociology minor will develop skills that will make you a valuable contributor to a range of careers, such as journalism, law, criminal justice, social work, and community development. This program illuminates the social forces, inequalities, and institutional structures that impact our lives. The skills and knowledge gained also form a strong foundation for graduate studies.

To earn the Sociology minor, you must successfully complete a 21-credit course of study.

SOCIOLOGY

ADVANTAGES OF A SOCIOLOGY MINOR

The Sociology minor enhances skills for careers in criminal justice, education, law, human and social services, market research, advertising, government, or other related fields.

You will learn investigative and analytical reasoning, and gain the ability to look at situations from different points of view.

MINOR REQUIREMENTS

You must complete seven, 3-credit courses from the following

CJ221	Corrections
CJ345	Criminology
SO101	Introduction to Sociology
SO203	Grassroots Activism for Social Change
SO205	Race and Ethnicity in Society
SO220	Families in Society
SO230	Sport and Society
SO240	Religion and Society
SO318	Social Science Research Methods
SO320	Social Welfare Policy
SO335	Introduction to Sociological Theory
SO350	Law and Society
SO400	Readings in Sociology
SO421	Inequality in Society
SO450	Special Topics in Sociology

APPLY TODAY!

franklinpierce.edu/sociology

SOCIOLOGY

Franklin Pierce University
College of Liberal Arts and Social Sciences